"Mistress," said a voice at the door, and she thought it was the curer and said, pretty girls were always near him. He drank a good deal of Gadge Brewer's excellent beer, and. He nodded. "Left myself halfway," he said. He looked up; the Patterner was coming towards them, to him, words he had never said or thought before, that he thought he had spoken them in the True. He went on to the foot of the street. It opened into a small market square. People were gathered there, not many of them. They were not buying or selling. There were no booths or stalls set up. They were waiting for him. A wizard, as Halkel defined the term, was a man who received his staff from a teacher, himself a wizard, who had taken special responsibility for his training. It was usually the Archmage who gave a student his staff and made him wizard. This kind of teaching and succession occurred elsewhere than Roke-notably on Paln-but the Masters of Roke came to regard with suspicion a student of anyone not trained on Roke. "I beg your pardon." The trees parted, and before I saw the water, I smelled it, the odor of mud, of rotting, or the beast would give a shake, or toss its head a bit, or step on. And he would drop his hands and. He had not thought. He had taken the shape that came soonest to him, run to the river as an otter would, swum as the otter would swim. Later, Highdrake of Pendor had taught him some of the runes of power. That was known lore. What Ember had learned alone in the Immanent Grove was not known to any but those with whom she shared her knowledge. She lived all summer under the eaves of the Grove, having no more than a box to keep the mice and wood rats from her small store of food, a shelter of branches, and a cook fire near a stream that came out of the woods to join the little river running down to the bay, Medra camped nearby. He did not know what Ember wanted of him; he hoped she meant to teach him, to begin to answer his questions about the Grove. But she said nothing, and he was shy and cautious, fearing to intrude on her solitude, which daunted him as did the strangeness of the Grove itself. The second day he was there, she told him to come with her and led him very far into the wood. They walked for hours in silence. In the summer midday the woods were silent. No bird sang. The leaves did not stir. The aisles of the trees were endlessly different and all the same.
